

LEADERSHIP & MANAGEMENT

QNET presents:

Organization and Employee Alignment: The Importance of Workplace Motivators & Behavioural Styles Thursday, March 8, 2012 – 8:15 a.m. to 4:15 p.m.

Matching talent with jobs in any organization takes more than asking a few behavioural questions. It is important to know what your culture rewards...the position rewards and how you want employees to perform. This session will provide clarity on validated drivers that motivate you and others, valuable insights into reading, understanding and adapting to the diversity of people in your workplace and will serve as a critical foundation for leading, coaching and mentoring others.

Learning Objectives:

- Clarify and validate personal drivers - Attitudes, values and interests that drive decision making and motivate you and those with whom you work
- Gain insights about creating motivating environments and managing different motivational styles
- Understand "me – me" and "you – me" potential conflicts
- Understand personal behavioural style, recognize and appreciate others' styles and the emotions that go with them and how to adapt and blend for improved communication and reduced conflict
- Gain increased understanding of yourself and others in solving problems, influencing people, coping with pace and change and handling rules and procedures set by others
- Understand the impact of body language

All participants will receive and utilize, throughout the session, the internationally validated TTI Insights Talent Profile.

Target Audience: Owners, Leaders/Managers/Supervisors, Human Resources, Internal and/or external Coaches/Mentors

Facilitator: Cec Hanec, President, Owner of Cec Hanec & Associates Inc. Through creative, customized solutions for the people side of business, Cec delivers leadership coaching and performance enhancement services for those wanting to improve their hiring, retention, communication and performance management practices.
