QNET presents:

The Learning Organization: A Model for Success

Wednesday, March 13, 2013 – 7:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. – Breakfast Presentation

Location: QNET - Suite 660, 175 Hargrave Street, Winnipeg

A major challenge for organizations today is developing and maintaining employee skills that contribute to industry performance and competitiveness. Continuous learning, using the Learning Organization model, plays a critical role in staff and department success.

Learning organizations integrate learning directly into all aspects of the organization through ongoing training and development.

The continuous development (and application) of knowledge, skills, abilities and attitudes results in improved product and/or service quality. The workplace culture supports learning and as a result employees have a greater commitment to their organization and to their work.

At this breakfast presentation, you will be introduced to:

- The Learning Organization model.
- A comparison between this model and the traditional learning model.
- A method to assess your organization and take the first steps to become a learning organization.

This session is for supervisors, leaders, managers and individuals with responsibilities related to training and staff development.

Presenter: Angela Busby brings to her presentations a dynamic combination of more than 20 years of work experience in operations management in the private sector and teaching in the fields of business and communication at the post-secondary level. She is passionate about the human factor of change management and the development of high performance work teams, emphasizing civility as a key element of job and team satisfaction. Angela has completed post-graduate studies in organizational psychology and change management at Oxford, earning her UK certification in both fields. She is currently pursuing pre-doctoral research focusing on the dynamics and the "human factor" of change management.
