You will also learn how to:

- Use a unique planning template created for each kind of document.
- Draw readers' attention to key information.
- Distinguish between essential and unessential information.
- Adapt to recent changes in business writing practices.
- Pose questions that evoke accurate responses.
- Plan and write documents specifically allied to your requirements, such as employee performance evaluations and observations, news releases, research papers and summaries of informal meetings.
- Proofread and edit your own and other writers' work.

The instruction will be combined with practical exercises to assure complete understanding of the techniques.
