

QUEST SERIES

QNET presents:

Managing Project Managers

Tuesday, May 12, 2009 – 7:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m.

So, you've asked one of your team to lead a project. They know how to manage projects, so you can be assured they'll define the project clearly, make a plan, and monitor and control the project through execution, delivery, and close-out. But wait! One of the critical factors for project success is "management support." What does that mean?

Learn how you can increase the chance your project managers will succeed:

- Managing the portfolio of projects, considering cost, benefits, risk, and feasibility with the available resources
- Building the project managers' understanding of and commitment to the project
- Decision-making as changes are proposed and risk events occur
- Being a "champion" for the project

Presenter: Allison Atkey, PMP, head of Atkey Consulting Inc., has managed a wide range of projects including project launches, organization change initiatives and application development. She has taught Project Management to over 2,000 individuals.

QUEST is a series of information sessions that bridge the gap between business needs and local consulting expertise. Presentations feature a variety of concepts, tools and practices relevant for today's workplace.
